Morgan ran into my classroom one day to check on me, making sure I was a good teacher for his big brother. He seemed to be satisfied. I think he was in fourth grade. It seems that I passed muster. Several years later, Morgan joined us in junior high. He and I tangled horns occasionally, but we always ended up in agreement and sealed our agreement with a hug. Morgan was a young man who really was afraid to let anyone get too close to him. Hopefully he will let our all merciful God wrap him in His arms and assure him that he will never hurt again. My precious little Morgan, I will miss you and love you forever. MPL
