I never saw Harold upset. He was always smiling and singing, usually church songs, prayers or "Mama said they'd be days like this"! He always had to hug and kiss you goodbye at least twice. That was after reading you your Miranda Rights. He loved to make people laugh despite his illness which he faced with courage and faith. Love you.

Sandy, Our thoughts and prayers are with you all. Harold was a nice and loving man. But, I have to thank you for bringing him into our lives. The earlier Harold was some I enjoyed knowing, but the latter Harold was someone I loved knowing. I hate that miserable disease took over his body. But it made him such a happy man. I have never met anyone so happy always loved my time with Harold. He just made one want to smile. With Love, Bryan and Gina
